Johnson Atis under negro and brother-in-law rule, torney General, there was an actual excess of white voters in the State, according to the census of 1870. At that time the total excess of white males under twenty-one years of age was 4.094, and of white voters 153. Since 1870, however, there has been a large negro immigration from Georgia and Alabama, and it is probable that now the negroes exceed the whites in numbers.
